Assistant Professor Position

The University of Iowa’s Department of Sociology invites applications for a tenure track position at the Assistant Professor level with research and teaching emphases in the area of criminology, deviance, social control, or criminal justice systems. We are interested in researchers using either qualitative or quantitative methods. The position will begin in the Fall 2016. We seek strong candidates who show evidence of ability to pursue ambitious research programs, including publications and external funding, and who have excellent teaching skills or potential. Applicants should have a Ph.D. in Sociology, Criminology, or related field in hand by August 17, 2016.

For information on how to apply, please visit http://jobs.uiowa.edu/ and reference Requisition #67130. Formal screening will begin on September 30, 2015 and will continue until the position is filled. Electronic attachments to the online application should include a cover letter, curriculum vitae, representative written work, name and contact information of references, and statement of research agenda. After applying, references will be sent a link to electronically upload their letters of recommendation.

The Department of Sociology and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences are strongly committed to gender, race, and ethnic diversity; the strategic plans of the University and College reflect this commitment. The University of Iowa is a large public university in a friendly, culturally diverse community. The Department of Sociology provides competitive salaries and benefits along with strong infrastructural support for research. The University of Iowa is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. All qualified applicants are encouraged to apply and will receive consideration for employment free from discrimination on the basis of race, creed, color, national origin, age, sex, pregnancy, sexual orientation, gender identity, genetic information, religion, associational preference, status as a qualified individual with a disability, or status as a protected veteran.