Two Open Faculty Positions

The Criminal Justice & Criminology Program at Marshall University invites applications for two tenure-track positions at the rank of Assistant/Associate Professor beginning August 2016. Established in 1974, the program is among the oldest in the state of West Virginia and the first to offer both bachelors and masters degrees in criminal justice. The program continues to expand with an increased emphasis on technology and is searching for energetic teachers and scholars. For more information about the program, please visit: http://www.marshall.edu/criminal-justice. Marshall University is located in the city of Huntington, which sits along the banks of the Ohio River among the majestic mountains of West Virginia.

The program is seeking candidates who will teach core criminal justice and criminology courses at the undergraduate and graduate levels, including a broad range of elective courses. For one position (000406), the program is searching for a candidate who can teach administration/management, crime prevention, and law enforcement. For the other position (001416), teaching emphasis in corrections, victimology, and criminal justice ethics is preferred. The selected candidates will also contribute to the University's general education curriculum, with its emphasis on a common First-Year Seminar and core curriculum courses that enhance student's critical thinking and the College's support of interdisciplinary programs of study. Qualifications for these positions include a Ph.D. in Criminal Justice, Criminology, or closely related discipline. ABD's with completion of degree by time of appointment will also be considered.

To apply, please go to http://www.marshall.edu/human-resources and click on “Job Opportunities” and search for faculty positions using the respective numbers identified above. Candidates will be required to apply online and upload a cover letter (include teaching philosophy), curriculum vitae, contact information for three references, and unofficial transcripts. Candidates selected for interview on campus must have official transcripts (undergraduate and graduate) forwarded directly to: Chair, Search Committee, Criminal Justice & Criminology, Marshall University, One John Marshall Drive, Huntington, WV 25755, prior to an on campus interview. Review of applications will begin October 15, 2015 and continue until the position is filled. AA/EOE
