Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Criminal Justice
Assistant Teaching Professor of Criminal Justice (Non-Tenure Track Position)

The Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Criminal Justice invites applications for a non-tenure-track full-time Assistant Teaching Professor of Criminal Justice beginning Fall 2016. The position is for an initial one-year appointment with the possibility of renewal for no less than two years and includes university benefits. Additionally, Rutgers University’s non-tenure-track positions offer opportunities to earn advancement in rank. A Ph.D. in Criminal Justice, Criminology, or a closely related field is required. A J.D. degree alone is not sufficient for this position.

The successful candidate will be able to teach broadly in the main areas of criminal justice. A strong preference will be given to candidates able to offer courses in criminological theory, policy, or ethics as well as courses in either policing or corrections. The teaching load for this position is four courses each semester (eight courses per year). One or more of these courses per semester may be replaced by advising, administrative and other responsibilities, such as teaching, developing and managing on-line courses. Responsibilities may also include teaching a course at one of the department’s off-campus programs.

Applicants should submit a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, teaching statement and teaching evaluations, if any, to Ms. Sherry Pisacano at pisacano@camden.rutgers.edu. They should also arrange for three reference letters to be sent to the same e-mail address. Review of applications will begin November 9, 2015 and continue until the position is filled.
