The University of Massachusetts Boston

Assistant Professor, Criminology

Job Description:

The Department of Sociology at the University of Massachusetts Boston invites applications for a tenure-track assistant professor in Criminology starting September 1, 2016. Candidates are expected to have primary research interests in sociological approaches to the study of crime and criminal justice; secondary areas of specialization are open but an interest in and ability to teach quantitative methods at the undergraduate and graduate level is strongly preferred. Potential for success in seeking external grant support will be given special attention.

UMass Boston is a research-high institution and offers faculty the opportunity to teach and conduct research in a vibrant and diverse urban setting. The department has approximately 1,000 undergraduate majors in sociology, social psychology, and criminal justice, a Master's Program in Applied Sociology, and a PhD Program in Sociology. Additional information about the Department can be obtained at http://www.umb.edu/academics/cia/sociology.

Requirements:

The appointment requires completion of the doctoral degree in Sociology or Criminology or a closely related discipline no later than 8/31/16. The successful candidate will be expected to develop an externally funded program of research as well as teach courses in the department's undergraduate and graduate programs, and contribute to graduate program development.

Additional Information:

UMass Boston provides equal employment opportunities (EEO) to all employees and applicants for employment.

Application Instructions:

Review of candidates will begin on September 15, 2015 and will continue until the position is filled. Submit online your cover letter, curriculum vitae, research and teaching statements, teaching evaluation data, no more than three samples of publications and other writing (2MB max file size) and names and contact information for references.
